The Mangyongdae Schoolchildren's Palace stands on Kwangbok Street in Pyongyang, the capital of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

It is a comprehensive base for extracurricular education and edification of the schoolchildren and a pedigree farm for training the talented. The unique architectural style of the building represents the warm embrace of the Workers' Party of Korea, the motherly party which spares nothing for the children.

Thanks to the ennobling outlook of the great leaders on the future, the rising generations, the palace was inaugurated in May Juche 78 (1989) at the scenic spot near Mangyongdae that is regarded as the native home to all the Korean people, as it is the birthplace of Kim Il Sung, the founder of socialist Korea. It was renovated in a splendid fashion in October Juche 104 (2015) to mark the 70th anniversary of the WPK.

Covering a total floor space of over 105 000 sq metres and a total area of over 214 000 sq metres, the palace whose interior resembles a wonderland in fairy tale has over 140 rooms for specialized groups, training, and other extracurricular activities, which can accommodate more than 5 000 students a day.

At the entrance hall of the eight-storey main building there is a board bearing the handwriting of Kim Il Sung who loved children all his life, and with this at the centre, rooms for science, art and sports groups conducive to the education of students to acquire deep knowledge, noble virtue and strong body, are laid out.

Linked with the main building through corridor is a four-storey building for comprehensive artistic training and performance with rooms for performing art groups.

In the main building, there are a theatre, gymnasium, swimming pool, library, e-reading room, electronic recreation hall and 4D simulation cinema which children like, area for diffusing astronomical knowledge, exhibition for stuffed gift animals and many other facilities for various activities, all to the children's liking.

The state supplies the palace with modern musical instruments, computers, sports equipment and facilities, and laboratory things so as to bring up talented personnel in large numbers.

Outside the buildings are the driver training lot, study site, sports playground, park, a dormitory that accommodates over a thousand people and other full-service amenities.

Indeed, the Mangyongdae Schoolchildren's Palace, a comprehensive base for extracurricular education of the students, epitomizes the WPK's ennobling affection for the future generations. In this cradle the Korean children are developing their talents with nothing to envy in the world and growing up into all-round personnel possessed of versatile knowledge and high cultural attainments.
